On its cliffs, there are many huge Buddhist murals which were painted in the Northern Wei (386 - 534), Sui (581 - 618), Tang (618 - 907) and the Yuan (1271 - 1368) Dynasties. In summer, a spectacular waterfall cascades down the red rock cliffs here. • You will also get to view Yan Zi Peak, Sanxian Ancestral Hall, Rui Quan Rock, Ying Zui Yan and Tian Che Jia. Here, you can taste the Mt Wuyi tea. Take a ride on the bamboo raft while cruising along the Nine Twists Stream, where you will be able to view the breathtaking scenery. A 'tu lou' is a unique architecture found only in the mountainous areas bordering Fujian and Guangdong in southern China. These earth buildings have only one entrance, guarded by 4–5-inch-thick wooden doors re-enforced with an outer shell of iron plate. • The top level of these earth building has gun holes for defense against bandits. In spite of the earth wall being more than 700 years old, they survived through centuries of natural elements, including earthquakes and yet still standing solid. • After that, take a coach back to Xiamen. The garden can be divided into two parts: the Garden of Hiding the Sea (Canghaiyuan) and the Garden of Making-Up Hills (Bushanyuan). There are five themes which can be found in both gardens. All the settings employ the use of three significant characteristics including hiding elements, borrowing from surroundings and combining movements. • Thereafter, we will visit the Piano Museum, which houses over 200 pianos. After lunch, watch an amazing tea art performance and get to sample the tea. Then visit South Putuo Temple, which is a famous ancient temple in Xiamen.
